CITY OF FAIRBURN INVESTIGATES CRANK CALLERS

Several Fairburn residents have received crank phone calls suggesting the City of Fairburn is shutting down. Fairburn is a duly recognized municipality within the State of Georgia and its status as such has not changed since its inception.

“The pandemic apparently has left some with nothing else to do but send out crank calls and engage in scams on unsuspecting citizens,” said Fairburn Mayor Elizabeth Carr-Hurst. “It goes without saying that Fairburn is here to stay and will be for the long haul.”

Fairburn police have conducted an initial investigation into the crank callers and will continue to investigate in an attempt to get to the bottom of the scam.

“Meanwhile, residents need to know that we are here and will be delivering city services as normal,” Mayor Carr-Hurst said.
